Increasingly more people are embracing this as completely sustainable, environmentally friendly option!

Fighting mosquitoes on your lawn, trees, shrubs, and garden is a sure way to keep your yard healthy. The most effective way to control mosquitoes is to eliminate their breeding grounds. Mosquitoes lay their eggs in standing water, so removing any water that collects in your yard is the best way to keep them from breeding. This includes removing any old tires, buckets, or other containers that collect water. If you have a lawn, mow it regularly to remove any tall grass that can collect water. If you have a garden, remove any debris that can collect water. If you have a pond, make sure it is clean and free of debris. If you have a swimming pool, make sure it is properly maintained. If you have a hot tub, make sure it is properly maintained. If you have a fountain, make sure it is properly maintained. If you have a birdbath, make sure it is properly maintained.
